

Colebrook Tji Tji Tjuta

c. 1981 –

Details

The Colebrook Tji Tji Tjuta was formed when a group of former residents of the Colebrook Children's Home came together following the closure of the Colebrook Home in 1981. The Colebrook Tji Tji Tjuta manages records of Colebrook Home

The Colebrook Tji Tji Tjuta played a key role in the campaign to form a permanent memorial to the Aboriginal children who were removed from their families and housed at Colebrook Home. The Colebrook Blackwood Reconciliation Park has two commissioned sculptures, and is located on the Eden Hills site where the Home was formerly located.

Gallery

Colebrook Reconciliation Park

Description: This is a video uploaded to YouTube by Jim Lesses, a member of the campaign in the 1990s to establish a memorial at the former site of Colebrook Home. This successful campaign led to the creation of the Colebrook Reconciliation Park in around 1998. The video features commissioned artworks by Silvio Apponyi: Pool of Tears (1998) and Grieving Mother (1999).

More info

Related Entries

Holds

- Admission Cards, Colebrook Home \(1950s - 1960s\)

Resources

- Colebrook Home, Flinders Ranges Research, No date
 - Atkinson-Phillips, Alison, Commemoration as Witnessing: 20 Years of Remembering the Stolen Generations at Colebrook Reconciliation Park, de arte, 2018
-

You can view this page online by visiting <https://www.findandconnect.gov.au/entity/colebrook-tji-tji-tjuta/>