

United Church, North Australia

1946 – 1977

Details

The United Church in North Australia had its roots in a multi-denominational congregation based in Darwin from 1946. In 1956 members of the Congregational, Methodist and Presbyterian churches moved to a shared church in Smith Street, Darwin and formed a United congregation. After their building was bombed during World War II, a new church was opened in July 1960 and named the Darwin Memorial United Church. The Darwin Church reported to the United Church in Northern Australia Board which was based in Sydney. The United Church in Northern Australia became part of the Uniting Church of Australia in 1977.
