

Health Commission, State Government of South Australia

1978 – 2008

Details

The Health Commission was established in 1978, following a merger of the Hospitals Department and the Department of Public Health. It was responsible for the oversight and regulation of public hospitals, including mental health hospitals. In 2004 a new Department of Health was created, and in 2008 the Health Commission was replaced by the Health Performance Council, which was part of the Department of Health.
