

Support Services

Find & Connect is for people who spent time in an orphanage or children's home in Australia between 1920 and 1990. Our support services can help you find family, access records, or with any issues that stem from being in care as a child. We are independent of any past providers, and do not hold any records ourselves. We are not affiliated with any record-holders or other organisations related to historical child welfare.

We can help you:

- access personalised support and counselling
- obtain personal records where possible, trace your history and help you understand why you were placed into care
- connect with other services and support networks that may assist you
- reconnect with family, where possible

1800 16 11 09 (freecall) directs you to the Find & Connect Support Service in your state or territory Monday – Friday, 9am – 5pm, or you can email us below.

If you need urgent help, Lifeline operates a 24-hour telephone counselling service. 13 11 14 (freecall).
