COTTAGE PARENTS

Boys at the Salvation Army Hollywood Children's Village practise leaping over a horse in the village gymnasium.

Families share their affection and fellowship

Three women at the Salvation Army Hollywood Children's Home are each mothers of up to three children and cottage mothers to another 12.

The home has three cottages—Brand House, Pied Piper and Buckingham—for 36 children.

Village manager Capt. Harold Sanders said that the cottage mothers had almost been adopted by some of the children as second parents.

Some children called their cottage mothers "mum" and others had become homesick when they were sent home in the Christmas holidays.

An open day will be held at the village on Saturday from 2 p.m. to 4.30 p.m. so that the public can see how the centre is run.

The day will be held in conjunction with a presentation of gymnasium equipment by the Netherlands Lions club.

The president of the club, Mr J. A. Fitzgibbon, said the equipment would be for gymnastics and indoor sports.

It would include basketball, volleyball and badminton equipment, a spring-board and wall fittings.

The club had raised the money at two Carols by Candlelight concerts, parking and gate fees from the Cottesloe Cup golf competition and social functions.

Capt. Sanders said that the village had existed as dormitories for about 50 years on its present location.

It had been a boys' home till this year when four girls were brought to it.

The 36 children were referred by the Child Welfare Department.

They were aged seven to 15 years and some had been at the cottage for five years and would probably stay longer.

The centre aimed to send the children back to their parents.

IMPOSSIBLE

If this could not be done it was neither child nor parent's fault. Sometimes a situation made rehabilitation impossible.

They lived as a family and got love and fellowship from their cottage parents and cottage brothers and sisters. (The cottage fathers work at

They lived as a family and got love and fellowship from their cottage parents and cottage brothers and sisters. (The cottage fathers work at an outside job.)

The first cottage was built in 1965, the second in 1966 and the third this year.

A fourth cottage being built would be ready in October.

The cottages have been built to give a family atmosphere.

Meals are prepared in a kitchen beside the gymnasium. They are taken to the individual cottages and served there.

STUDY DESKS

The children sleep in single, two or three bed rooms. Their rooms are individually decorated and they have personal wardrobes and dressing tables. Some students have study desks.

A big television room is a main attraction in the cottages. Four tables are used for meals in a dining room.

The children of different ages are mixed in the three cottages.

They help themselves by taking part-time jobs where possible. If they do not earn money and their parents cannot give them any, the centre gives occasional pocket-money.

"We ask parents to pay what they can afford towards their child's keep," Mr Fitzgibbon said.

"This helps them to realise that they have a

SATURDAY: DOUBLE OPENING

AT Hollywood on Saturday afternoon there were two official openings associated with the West Aust. congress. The first began at 1.45 p.m. when the mayor of Nedlands, Mr. Charles Smith, who was accompanied by Mrs. Smith, opened a swimming pool at the children's village section. Then an hour later the federal minister for social services, Mr. William Wentworth, opened another section of senior citizens' flats, named Wyvern. Commissioner Harvey presided on both occasions.

The pool was a gift to the village. Wyvern was a $1,225,000 scheme, the largest project in the history of The Salvation Army in the territory. This single building consists of 15 single and 18 married flats.

Heavy rain forced alterations to the opening gatherings, which were transferred to the large gymnasium hall.

For the initial gathering Brigadier Kowalick (S.M.S.S.) introduced the Commissioner who warmly commended the numerous friends "who came to the Army's aid again and again."

Commissioner Harvey said that the pool had been a donation by Wood and Grieve, consulting engineers, who had had a vital part in the Wyvern project. Other supporters recognised were the Nedlands city council for excavation and earthworks, Martin and Laurence Pty. Ltd. for material and labour to the electrical installation and the services of their representative Mr. John Boyle.

In a bright and friendly manner the mayor offered his congratulations to all concerned, gave some sound advice to the young people who will use the pool and then declared it officially open. Owing to the rain it was impossible to unveil the commemorative plaque.

(The opening of Wyvern, and a feature, will appear later.)
